

David Grusky

David B. Grusky is Professor of Sociology at Stanford University, incoming Director of the Program on Social Inequality at Stanford University, and coeditor (with Paula England) of the Stanford University Press Social Inequality Series. He is carrying out research on the contours of social mobility and sex segregation, the structure of racial and cross-national variability in social mobility and sex segregation, the rise and fall of social classes under advanced industrialism, the sources of modern attitudes toward gender inequality, and long-term trends in patterns of occupational and geographic mobility. His recent and forthcoming books are Social Stratification: Class, Race, and Gender in Sociological Perspective (2nd edition), Poverty and Inequality (coedited with Ravi Kanbur), Mobility and Inequality (coedited with Stephen Morgan & Gary Fields), Occupational Ghettos (coauthored with Maria Charles), and Inequality: Classic Readings in Race, Class, and Gender (coedited with Szonja Szelényi).