Assistant professor of economics at the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona. He earned his BA from the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona in 1992, his MSc from the University of York in 1994, and his PhD in Economics from the University of Essex in 1998. Inequality is one of his main concerns and takes much of his research time and effort. He has worked on measuring and accounting for inequality and poverty in several European countries, on earnings mobility, and on horizontal inequality. He is currently working on three areas: multidimensional measurement of well-being, the impact of subjective expectations on income risk, and attitudes to income distribution aspects using questionnaire based methodology.
