

Stefan Dercon

Stefan Dercon is the Professor of Development Economics at Oxford University, United Kingdom. Previously, he taught at universities in Belgium and Ethiopia. His main interests are applied theoretical and empirical work on issues of poverty dynamics and risk. In recent years, he has been involved in developing long-term household panel data sets in Ethiopia, India and Tanzania to increase our understanding of long-term welfare changes.